On Thursday, June 3rd, Venable and M&T Bank will be providing webinar participants with an analysis of the effect of the evolving policy and regulatory landscape on developing power and related projects.

Despite substantial economic support programs, renewable power development is a very challenging undertaking for all participants - power and utility companies and even firms focused solely on the development of electric facilities.

This webcast will provide a roadmap for positioning your company to successfully develop, deploy and operate new renewable power facilities, while also identifying a number of potential obstacles along that road.
